The University of Chicago will equip you to think freely and deeply about geographic, cultural, religious, socioeconomic, and political backgrounds, promising over 100 countries, our community represents a wide variety of ethnic, religious, and cultural experiences. Together, our differences create a culture that empowers the individual, supports the multifaceted and interconnected society we live in. You will gain context in different cultures. Students celebrate their culture in annual shows such as the popular South Asian Student Associations (SASA) show and the annual International Student Week. The Office of Multicultural Student Affairs (OMSA) is dedicated to both supporting multicultural students on campus and working to build an inclusive campus community. OMSA provides a network of organizations for multicultural students on campus, including a mentoring program with both graduate students and alumni of the College, career and professional development workshops, and other programs that contribute to the multicultural student experience on campus. Students enjoy hanging out at the Center for Identity & Inclusion, which is home not only to OMSA, but also to the OTRs of LGBTQ Student Affairs. OMSA works hard to ensure that students from a wide array of cultures and backgrounds are able to incorporate their heritage into the life of the mind.

“The University of Chicago is distinctive in many respects, but perhaps in none more so than our singular commitment to rigorous inquiry that demands multiple and often competing perspectives. Diversity for the University is therefore particularly germane to our core perspective.”

— Robert Zimmer
President
